LOUISVILLE, Ky., Tuesday, June 27. The Democratic State Convention now being held at Music Hall in this city will go down in history as the longest, the most sensational, and the most political convention ever held in this state.

The game of politics that has been played from the start has been one of intense interest.

The wire pullers behind the scenes were master hands and they made their moves with the brilliancy of expert chess players.

The delegates composing the convention had no rights that the bosses were bound to respect and the votes they commanded were considered as commodities that could be bought and sold for certain considerations.

The representatives of each faction were in a position to trade or enter into any deal or combination with the confidence of "delivering the goods" at any time whether the delegates voted it or no.

The delegate, in fact, had no individuality. Collected in the convention hall were three flocks of sheep. One was led by Hardin's bell wether, another by Stone's bell wether and the last by Goebel's bell wether.

The convention met Tuesday. On Monday the delegates began to arrive and the candidates to open up headquarters in the city.

On Tuesday night every hotel in the city was filled with guests. The various headquarters of the candidates were filled with delegates, who were treated to free cigars, free beer and free whiskey until they became tired of smoking or were made happy by large juice jugs.

On Wednesday the convention hall would develop sensational events. The district meetings that were held at Music Hall Tuesday morning indicated the strength of the factions and when it was over it was clearly apparent that a Stone-Goebel combine had been formed to beat Hardin.

The convention was called to order at noon Tuesday by Chairman Thompson, two candidates for temporary chairman were put in nomination.

Sweeney of the Fourth district was the

She had no trouble in delivery, no swelling, no drawing, no swelling, no rising breath. Her baby was strong and the picture of health.

Mother's Friend is the only remedy known which relieves the expectant mother. It is a liquid to be applied externally, but it can be taken internally taking medicine internally at such times. All internal preparations said to relieve confinement did not only hurt, but positively dangerous.

Hardin candidate and Redwine, a most intense Goebel partisan was the Goebel-Sione candidate.

Redwine was chosen to facilitate the business of the convention based on the contests in the vote for temporary chairman and ruled that the delegates allowed to vote whose credentials had been signed by the regular chairman and secretary of the mass conventions.

As a result of his decisions the Stone-Goebel candidate, Redwine was elected over Sweeney by a very few votes, after an intensely exciting and close election.

Redwine was chosen as temporary chairman and the start he assumed that he was Goebel's man for the place.

He is weak, prejudiced and from the start his rulings were more arbitrary than Bonapart, in his palmiest days, would have been.

The convention was altogether unlike democratic conventions of former years.

Questions of democratic policy were lost sight of and local political issues of Louisville engrossed the sole attention of the body.

Wednesday was a day of intense political maneuvering, when the convention was held at Music Hall.

On Thursday the convention was held at the same place and through him controlled the weak, milk and water effluvia of a man named Stone.

The two aspirants for the gubernatorial nomination, Stone and Goebel, allowed their insatiate, ambitious domineering sentiment or principle and the result was that the men became greater than the cause.

At the close of the convention the two aspirants, the chairman, Redwine, issued a statement that he would be a small factor in the race.

Nearly all the speakers favored the Goebel nomination, and the result was that he was the man they had marked for slaughter.

The election of a majority of Goebelians on the committee on credentials made it possible for the Goebelites to have a majority vote, or a majority of the votes, to nominate Goebel.

At the close of the convention the two aspirants, the chairman, Redwine, issued a statement that he would be a small factor in the race.

They were there to fight or vote, as their masters saw fit to dictate.

The slight disturbance would have been a mere nothing to a mob to have charged the convention and bloodshed would have resulted.

The delegates, on Friday night realized that a mob had gathered to intimidate them and that the chair, with this backing, was in a most arbitrary position.

They became disorderly and obstructed all business and the convention was compelled to adjourn until the next day.

On Saturday morning the committee on credentials brought in its report.

The majority report unseated a large portion of Hardin's instructed vote and as a result the majority report was defeated by a two-thirds combination of 441 to 368.

About eleven o'clock or just after the adoption of the majority report, a most dramatic scene took place.

P. Watt Hardin, preceded by his man, J. James B. Thompson was seen coming down the aisle in the direction of the stage.

Immediately cries of Hardin! Hardin! Hardin! came from all parts of the house until the up roar became deafening.

Hardin reached the stage and gently waving his hand for quiet he prepared to speak.

Intense, expectant silence ensued. A pin dropping at that moment would have disturbed the house.

It was at this moment, the most sensational, the most dramatic moment of an intensely sensational and dramatic convention that P. Watt Hardin made his following speech of withdrawal.

"The hour has come when I myself must act. Realizing that the interests of the party demand an expression of will in this convention, I have come to you, my people, my party, and my platform, and I appear before you to say that loving my party better than myself, I now withdraw from this race."

"This fight has been a peculiar one. Much has been said by all sides that has been severe. I have given blows and taken them without wincing, with the firmness of a man who fights for the sake of his party, to put myself at the service of my enemies in this fight. There is not a man in this house whose eyes I cannot look into and say that I have never done him a wrong. I waive all that is personal, and my name shall not be placed before this convention again."

"But I have one request to make of friends and foes alike, in behalf of the party and the platform and its future, don't transfer it into the hands of those who slaughtered us before. I forgive all that is personal. My name cannot go before you, because I believe it best that this name should not be mentioned, that friend and foe alike should shake hands and say, 'we'll come together as true loyal Democrats, and make an organization that we can support.' Is the fight of 1895 to be repeated? I say no."

"For the honor of Kentucky, for the honor of the Democratic party, let us forgive, fight in the name of the honor of our state, and let us unite and give us an organization that will win for this state and for the nation."

"When Hardin said: "I now withdraw from this race," an intensely emotional scene took place.

Hardin, who had made a farce, his purpose for him rushed to the front of the platform, raised their hands appealingly and with voices trembling with emotion called out: "No! No! No!"

When his speech was concluded the reports of the committee on organization and resolutions were read and adopted.

Resolutions were then voted on.

When the Third district was called Congressman John Rhea nominated W. J. Stone for governor; Charles Wheeler seconded the nomination.

Judge Tarvin then nominated Mr. Goebel. In his speech Tarvin denounced the Louisville and Nashville railroad and commended the Goebel election law.

Judge Hargie created a sensation by seconding Goebel's nomination on behalf of Hardin's friends.

Bronston also seconded Goebel's nomination, saying that he would rather a brainy polity get the nomination than a stupid demagogue.

Leon Redwine, of Breathitt county, seconded the nomination of Goebel. He is a nephew of Judge Hargie.

J. N. Kehoe, of Mason county, also seconded Goebel's nomination.

James Garrett declared Adair would vote for Goebel.

Hardin died to transact business because so great that it resulted in a mass meeting at Beck's hall where various speakers arranged Redwine and his bones in the most severe and bitter terms.

A resolution was adopted calling for the chair to the role of committee on a vote on every question that came before the convention.

Nearly all the speakers favored the Goebel nomination, and the result was that Louisville and Goebel could sink. The agreement had been made that Louisville should divide its vote equally between Goebel and Stone. But Lee Rhee, seeing the great change in Goebel's position, urged every promise and obligation, and cast the entire vote to Goebel. This on the heels of Daviess county casting its entire strength to Goebel.

The resolutions were closed and the call of committee proceeded.

Then came excitement. The Hardin men threw their votes to Goebel until at one time he was within thirty votes of a nomination.

It was when Jefferson county was represented that the convention realized that the convention resulted to what depth of treachery, perfidy and shame that Weaverian, Haldeman and Goebelians could sink.

On Saturday morning the committee on credentials brought in its report.

The majority report unseated a large portion of the Goebel people. In the mean time, they agreed to no proposition from the Hardinites. The results were the same at the opening of the evening session as they were in the afternoon despite the attempt of the Times to create a stampede by falsely stating that Goebel would withdraw from the Goebel people.

When the delegates gathered for the evening session they were in fine humor. The police were present to the number 150 and were prepared to do the will of their masters.

The delegates were too good natured, however, to "start anything," and between the roll calls they sang hymns and ragtime songs.

I was seriously afflicted with a cough for several years, and laid by more severe complications. I have had many remedies without receiving much relief, and being recommended to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, by a friend, who, knowing me to be a poor widow, gave it to me. I tried it with the most gratifying results. The first bottle relieved me much and I have since used many more bottles without receiving much relief, and being recommended to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, by a friend, who, knowing me to be a poor widow, gave it to me. A READER OF THE NEWS
Writes an Interesting Letter From Cumberland City, Tenn.

The most remarkable and damaging hail storm passed through this country two weeks ago, that was ever witnessed. I saw young trees as much as six inches apart that had the bark fairly torn from them, though the trees were not hit by heavy loads of bullets. The tree tops were threshed off until they looked like they had been passed through a mill. A farmer a short distance out had 75 acres of wheat, which was threshed out so completely that down it lay. One old man's carriage was torn to pieces and destroyed. There was nothing left but the bare stalks. I saw the end of a house that looked as though it had been shot into with a gun loaded with gravel.

A man from the trees was hardly acceptable by any tales they could see it as I have. Gardens are completely demolished.

Cumberland is a small town situated on the bank of the Cumberland river and the Louisville and Memphis branch of the L. & N. The greatest injuries that I have ever seen happened of the L. & N. is very marked when we have a water competition. Most any boat can beat her and Louisville can pay as much as twice the freight rate as this point, although they are as much as 100 miles nearer. The freight rate here is from 15 to 20 cents per hundred, while I know of points where it is 100 miles nearer that pay double that rate. The injustice it seems to be, that it is in this case, I suppose of taking advantage of this road. The boats are delivering freight from Evansville and Paducah for 5 cents per hundred.

Since writing the above, a very heavy rain with considerable wind and the air filled with electrically charged over the town. Lightning hit a tree 75 feet from the storm I am now in. From the nature of the storm, there will be some damage to report from near by.

The crops are general through western Kentucky and Tennessee are not so promising as last year owing to the back-warnings in getting the crop out. Not more than half a wheat crop being harvested.

Woman's Mysterious Ills.

woman are continually puzzled about their health. Indeed female troubles puzzle all women. Older women have experienced but few pains known to medicine. The periodical suffering is painful. It is accompanied by many varying sensations that distress. Much depends upon the cause. It is a matter of guesswork. The whole question is shrouded in professional mystery.

Dr. Hartman, a physician for women, called "Health and Beauty," treats these matters with delicacy, and at the same time with clearness. Write to him for his book on Chronic Catarrh.

Mrs. C. C. Naeve, 886 Morrison St., Portland, Ore., writes as follows:

Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O.
I have never had a cold since I took Pe-ru-na when I lived in Columbus, O. in 1897, and have used it and the Man-in-a-line ever since whenever I needed medicine. I have never found an equal to Pe-ru-na for regulating the menses, and before I began to take it I never required a doctor. I have had a cold since I took Pe-ru-na but with success.

There is nothing mysterious about the action of Pe-ru-na. It is not a "cure-all," but it cures catarrh wherever located, and there may be catarrh in any organ of the body, as all organs are susceptible.

Miss Mabel Waukeet, of Columbus, O., says: "I have been troubled with catarrh and a soreness in my bowels for several years. I tried everything that was recommended. I tried Pe-ru-na and am happy to say that I am now entirely well."

Dr. Hartman's advice may be had without charge by any woman who will write to him. His book on Chronic Catarrh is also mailed free. It explains the danger of local treatment. All druggists sell Pe-ru-na.
